

MARGARET PACKETT,

That's the trouble, they comes back and Scott says he was a-coming over in to their house when Lester, when Lester come back, and Lester didn't come back and he stayed all night but Scott said the next morning when he come to me, he said he heared somebody talking in the night and the next morning he went on up to where they were talking and they was Lester and Robert Hicks, and his wife was a-laying in Lester's arms, and his wife got up and run around the hill and he tried to get her to come back and talk to him and she wouldn't, and he come on over to my house then and told me that he didn't care for Lester a-talking to his wife, but he'd kill Carl Miller if he ever catched him there, but that's when he said poor boy he was a-going to see trouble, I reckon that's about all I know.

-----

Why I did?

-----

What was it like?

-----

Oh yes, got two inches left now, ain't it?

-----

Well, Scott come back to my house the next morning, he come on out here and was sitting right here and come on back and went to laying his hands on, his shoes was gone, and he went on up on the mountain and he met up with Lester Brown and Oney Hicks and Floyd Brown, well Floyd stood there and talked with him, he says, "Floyd," he says, "Floyd," says "boys," he says, "I have to go," he says "If it wasn't for that I'd be here with ye all day," now that's all I told him.
