The South Carolina Council on the Holocaust Teacher Advisory Committee Presents the 8th Annual Teacher Workshop

Lessons from the Holocaust: Teaching with Primary Sources

Friday, October 18, 2013, Columbia College; Columbia, S.C.
Registration and Refreshments 8:00 AM - 8:30 AM; Workshop 8:30 AM – 4:00 PM

Keynote Speaker:

Morris Glass
Holocaust Survivor and Co-author of Chosen for Destruction: The Story of a Holocaust Survivor

Morris Glass was eleven years old when the Nazis invaded Poland and changed his life forever. A childhood filled with school, soccer, and cowboy movies was transformed into a nightmare of ghettos and camps, unending hunger, exhausting work, fear, and loss. Morris spent four and a half years in ghettos in his hometown and in Lodz (the longest lasting ghetto), two months in Auschwitz-Birkenau, and eight months in five camps that were part of the Dachau camp system. At the end of the war, he was liberated by the American army. During those years, he lost his youth, his home, and his father, mother, and two sisters. Out of forty-two close family members only Morris, his brother, and a first cousin survived.

Workshop Sessions conducted by Dr. Lauren Granite, Centropa and Sally Levine, The Breman Museum.

Dr. Lauren Granite directs the US educational programs of Centropa, the first oral history project that combines old family pictures with the stories that go with them. Centropa has interviewed 1,200 elderly Jews living in Central and Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union, and the Sephardic communities of Greece, Turkey and the Balkans. With a database of 22,000 digitized images, they bring Jewish history to life in ways never done before. Sally Levine, USHMM Teacher Fellow and Regional Educator, is the Teacher Curriculum Coordinator for The Breman Jewish Heritage and Holocaust Museum in Atlanta, GA. The Breman celebrates and commemorates the Jewish experience and the universal themes of diversity and human dignity by collecting, preserving, interpreting and teaching Jewish values, culture and history, inspired by the dedication and courage of the Jewish people. By presenting the complex relationship between minority and majority communities within a culture, The Breman strives to underscore the need for every individual to make moral choices for the benefit of the entire society.
