Scholars of early Islamic history and texts suggest that early Muslim interest in Jerusalem and especially its acclaimed Rock of Foundation was directly influenced by their understanding of Jerusalem’s religious significance to both Jews and Christians. This lecture will show how formative Muslim traditions, with their innovative interpretation of the earlier sources, also influence later Christian and Jewish eschatological understandings of Jerusalem.